Two Kings

The Two Kings are coming to your class!

Good King and Bad King puppets – a simple, joyful tool to teach children to choose good, every day.

Why does it work?

- ✓ Instead of "Don't do that!" you ask: "Who are you listening to?"
- ✓ Children understand on their own – no scolding
- ✓ Fits every moment: clean-up, lines, sharing, arguments
- ✓ Shy children speak through the puppet
- ✓ Works all year – holidays too

What do you get?

- ✓ A pair of quality puppets – the Good King and the Bad King
- ✓ A printable kit: weekly plan, situation cards, posters, charts, a game, certificates and a letter to parents
- ✓ A guide: how to use the puppets all year round

Where does it come from?

The Two Kings series by Rabbi Fishel Jacobs grew out of a stage play performed for more than 15 years in schools, summer camps and community centers. It is based on the parable of the two kings battling over a "little city" – our heart.

10 Ways to Use the Puppets Every Day

1 Good morning circle
The kings say good morning. "Who will we listen to today?"

2 Before clean-up
The Bad King whispers "Leave it…" and the children answer him back!

3 A card instead of a scolding
Hold up the "Who am I listening to?" card, and the child fixes it on their own.

4 After an argument
Each child tells what happened through a puppet, and together you find a solution.

5 A shy child
Hand them the Good King, and suddenly they're talking.

6 Situation cards
Pull a card, two children act it out, and everyone suggests an idea.

7 Good King of the Day
The child who chose good wears the badge and holds the puppet.

8 The class crown
Every good deed = a jewel in the crown. A full crown = a celebration!

9 Before a holiday
A holiday dilemma: share treats? Help clean up?

10 Parents' party
The children act out the Two Kings story for their parents.

A Week with the Two Kings

A ready plan – 15–20 minutes a day

Day 1	Meet the Two Kings Tell the story with the puppets. Each child says hello to each king. Hang up the poster "Everyone has Two Kings". 📎 Puppets, poster, coloring page
Day 2	Who said it? Play "Who said it?" out loud: the teacher says a sentence and the children point to the right king. Then do the worksheet. 📎 "Who said it?" page, "Who am I listening to?" card
Day 3	Circle role-play Pull a situation card. Two children hold the puppets and act it out, and the class suggests an idea that helps the Good King win. 📎 Situation cards, puppets
Day 4	My idea Read David's dilemma again. Each child draws their own idea and tells the class. Make crowns and stick puppets. 📎 "What would you do?", paper crown, stick puppets
Day 5	Celebrate the Good King Play "The Road to the Palace" in groups. Hand out certificates, take photos with the puppets, and send a letter home to parents. 📎 Board game, certificates, letter to parents

After the week: the puppets stay in the Two Kings corner. Hold up the "Who am I listening to?" card instead of scolding, color the class crown, and choose a "Good King of the Day" every day.

Dear Parents,

This week our class met two special guests: the Good King and the Bad King from the Two Kings book series. We heard the story of David, whose Mommy asked him to watch his little sister while his friends were calling him to play outside, and we learned that everyone has two kings inside, and we can choose which one to listen to.

In class we practice three steps: Stop – Think – Choose. We would be so happy if you continued the conversation at home. A short page for a family talk is attached below.

Warmly,

Teacher _____

Talking at Home about the Two Kings

1. What did the Bad King say to David? And what did the Good King say?
2. Tell me about one time today when you listened to the Good King.
3. What will we do tomorrow to help the Good King win?
